

... person moving through a tactically posed environment will be led to perform procedures that may or may not be recognizable to her as procedures. At of a sudden, what seemed a group of disparate actions, the doing of this and that, may strike her as the steps of a procedure. . . Not a fixed set of called-for actions, an architectural procedure is a spatiotemporal collaboration between a moving body and a tactically posed environment. *

Madeline Gins : Krakawa

